US AT THE END OF THE YEAR

The pain of being in love with someone you know can never be yours.

A film by Nestor Abrogena

TBA
STUDIOS

Sam, a struggling filmmaker, now happily works as a media teacher at a Senior High School with his girlfriend Anna, a Literature teacher. Isa, on one hand, is a writer for a PR company. Her childhood best friend and boyfriend Frank, a pilot in training for a private plane company, decides to go with her to the US.

Both Sam and Isa are former lovers turned friends, and after 5 years of being apart, they get together in a public event. They find out about each other's relationships and get to meet their current partners. Unknowing to them, their encounter would cast the couples to drift off into each of their own pits of pain as they attempt to figure out who they are in their respective relationships. They silently dwell in the past while dealing with their own issues in the present. The next encounters build up into confrontations as the old flame between Isa and Sam sparks.

On Christmas Day, Isa and Sam decide to figure out the unfinished, dysfunctional relationship but will realize that they just cannot be together given their respective circumstances. What's lost is found and what's found is lost.

In the end, Isa, Sam, Anna and Frank attempt to place themselves in a world not for them to eventually accept.
